Free cerebral palsy workshop

Children who learn to be inclusive in their school years will go on to be more socially inclusive as adults, and help create a more inclusive society, according to industry expert Associate Professor Bob Jackson, an authority on social inclusion.

The Perth-based psychologist will be in Toowoomba from Saturday 7th May to present a dynamic workshop - Engaging in Life: Building belonging in schools and communities by holding fast to your family vision.

The workshop, hosted by the Cerebral Palsy League, is free and will explore how local families can build a full life for their child. as well as what the local community can do to support inclusion.

Engaging in Life will be held at the City Golf Club, 254 South Street on Saturday 7th May from 9:30am to 3pm.

Morning and afternoon teas and lunch will be provided.
