Free workshop

● CHILDREN who learn to be inclusive in their school years will go on to be more socially inclusive as adults, and help create a more inclusive society, according to industry expert Associate Professor Bob Jackson.

The Perth-based psychologist will be in Toowoomba from tomorrow to present a dynamic workshop – Engaging in Life: Building belonging in schools and communities by holding fast to your family vision.

The workshop, hosted by the Cerebral Palsy League, is free and will explore how Toowoomba families can build a full life for their child, as well as what the local community can do to support inclusion.
